Leasing

If you don't fly an airplane enough to justify keeping it, a lease is a viable way to enjoy the conveniences and benefits of on-demand travel.

What makes leasing more appealing than fractional ownership?

Like fractional ownership, you lease time on a specific serial-numbered aircraft; you just don't have any maintenance or associated fees to deal with. You fly your own plane with a familiar crew, on your schedule, with all the amenities, minus the long-term commitments. Your decision may also be driven by the amount of up-front capital needed to purchase versus lease.

Leasing is a smart business move.

- Lease payments are typically treated as expenses
- A lease may have tax advantages for the lessee
- Less money is required up front
- Easily switch between aircraft as needs change
- At the end of the lease, you can walk away, renew, or possibly purchase the aircraft.
